Project Description/Justification:

The Alaska Public Safety Academy has been the primary resource for the State of Alaska in law enforcement and public safety training since 1968. The academy's curriculum includes basic police training, Village Public Safety Officer training, and recurring training for both departmental law enforcement officers and other agencies.

The construction of a dining facility is one of the most important improvements needed at the Academy. The department previously contracted food service with the now defunct Sheldon Jackson College. After the college's closure, the department has to transport cadets several miles three times per day for meals. This scenario is expensive for the state and is a very inefficient use of time. Construction of a kitchen and dining facility is a necessary addition to the Academy. The facility will provide long-term savings for food service and maximize the amount of time cadets spend on campus for better training.

With design at the 95% completed mark, the engineers estimate the cost for a minimum configuration of the facility at just over $2,303,000. The department expects to be able to use some existing facilities funding for repairs and renovations for existing facility issues that will be impacted by the addition that normally would be covered by construction funding.
